The mark

Avatar · on dark

Avatar · on light

The mark pairs a lowercase d with a solid green block: a command-line cursor. It says what dean.id is, a live system you can actually talk to (`curl dean.id/v1/me`). The cursor is the brand's single spark of colour and is never recoloured.

Use the avatar wherever a square or circular mark is needed: profile photos, app icons, favicons, and the email (BIMI) logo.

Clearspace: keep at least one cursor-block of empty space around the logo. Minimum size: 24 px for the avatar, 90 px wide for the wordmark.

Do: keep green for the cursor only, and place the mark on solid, high-contrast backgrounds.

Don't: recolour, stretch, rotate, add shadows or outlines, or sit the dark mark on a busy photo.

Monospace is the voice of the brand: it reads as code, terminal, API. The wordmark is set in a bold monospace with the green block cursor. For UI labels and documents use any clean monospace (the site ships its own; JetBrains Mono and IBM Plex Mono are good free stand-ins). For long-form body text a neutral humanist sans works well.

Email logo (BIMI)

Self-asserted BIMI logo. Shows next to your emails in Yahoo, AOL, Fastmail and others. Gmail and Apple Mail need a paid certificate.

The stamp: a footer badge at dean.id/badge.svg for sites you have built, fixed or grown.
